

OUTLINE G. O. P. CANDIDATE'S ACCEPTANCE

(By Associated Press.)

MARION, Ohio, July 22.—The Republican campaign attained full speed here with the formal notification of Warren G. Harding, the party's nominee for the presidency. The notification ceremony, which brought most of the big leaders of the party and many thousands of Harding enthusiasts, included an acceptance speech by Harding declaring the principles on which he expects the campaign to be fought. His speech came at the end of a long program in which high pitched enthusiasm ruled the day as the visiting delegation marched on the Harding residence in an unbroken procession to be received by the candidate and to pay their respects. At 7 o'clock this morning a noisy demonstration in their howling acclaim. The speaker played a leading part in the flag raising, pulling the stars and stripes to the top of the weather beaten McKinley flagpole sent from Canton. Delegation after delegation, accompanied by bands with flying banners followed each other up to the Harding front porch as thirty special trains and thousands of automobiles unloaded their contributions to the solification crowds.

Business adjourned and partisanship was forgotten as the Republicans and Democrats joined in the acknowledgment of the honor to one of their neighbors.

MARION, Ohio, July 22.—Senator Lodge in the presence of the notification committee and many guests and townsmen today notified Senator Harding of his selection by the national Republican convention as the candidate for president of the United States.

Senator Lodge said in part:

Senator Harding: We are assembled here as a committee representing the states, territories and possessions of the United States to make to you formal announcement of your nomination for the office of president of the republic on June 15 last, at Chicago by the Republican national convention. This duty is to us as pleasing as it is honorable.

Have No Doubt of Him.

We await your acceptance untroubled by any doubts and with the most entire confidence. All who are familiar with your character and career and most especially those who have taken part with you in public service know beyond a peradventure that you are a patriotic American, imbued with the spirit of the great leaders of the past, of Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt, whose services to the American people have become forever memorable in our history. You will always, and instinctively, in meeting the difficult questions and weighty responsibilities which confront you, think with complete unselfishness of your country and your country's interests first, a high qualification for an exalted office but too familiar to us of late and therefore peculiarly necessary at this moment.

Harding's Reply in Brief.

Senator Harding in reply gave a pledge of constitutional government, administered by party and not by individuals, and based on national rather than world ideals, in deep ing formally the Republican nomination for the presidency.

He welcomed a popular referendum on the league of nations, advocated increased production to cut the high cost of living, pleaded for betterment of condition and class conflict, and declared for industrial peace "not forced but inspired by the common weal."

Harding Made Prohibition.

Prohibition he gave only a passing notice, saying that despite divided opinion regarding the eighteenth amendment and the statutes enacted to make it operative, there must be no evasion in their enforcement. He declared it his "sincere desire" that ratification of the suffrage amendment be completed to permit women to vote this fall in every state.

Reviewing and commending briefly many other planks of the party platform, the candidate declared for collective bargaining for farmers, reorganization of the judicial, "generous federal cooperation" in rehabilitating the railroads, intelligent definition of the currency, enlargement of government aid to reclamation, a genuine expression of gratitude to veterans of the world war, the maintenance of an ample navy and a "small army, but the best in the world."

No One Man Big Enough.

In his promise of "a party government," Senator Harding reiterated his belief that the vice president should have a part in the affairs of the chief executive's official family and declared there also should be a "cordial understanding and coordinated activities" between the executive and congress. "No man," he said, "is big enough to run this great republic. Our first commitment is the restoration of representative popular government, under the constitution, through the agency of the Republican party."

Promising restoration of peace as soon as a Republican congress should send a peace declaration to a Republican president for his signature, the candidate assailed the league covenant as brought home by President Wilson, but declared the war's sacrifices would be "in vain if we can not establish a new order, with added security in civilization and peace maintained."

Stipped Victory Council.

"We Republicans of the Senate," he continued, "when we see the structure of a world supergovernment, lacking victory from joined in a becoming warning of our devotion to this republic. The Republicans of the senate hailed the better of independent American sentiment and influence."

"We do not mean to hold aloof.

We do not mean to shut a single responsibility of this republic. We were resolved then, even as we are today, and will be tomorrow, to preserve this free and independent republic. Let those now responsible, seeking responsibility, propose the surrender, whether with interpositions, apologies or reluctant reservations, from which our rights are to be ousted. We welcome the referendum to the American people on the preservation of America."

Wants Clear Understanding.

"With a senate advising as the constitution contemplates, I would respectfully approach the nations of Europe and of the earth, proposing that understanding which makes us a participant in the consecration of nations to a new leadership, to commit the moral forces of the world, America included, in peace and international justice, will leave America free, independent and self-reliant, but offering friendship in all the world."

Whisperings of a big motion picture corporation featuring Annette Kellerman, the threatened kidnapping of a woman in an airplane, the story of a man taking a pretty girl at the age of 19 from a cigar counter in Chicago and posing as her husband before her father, and several years later leaving her in Los Angeles, are heard in the case of Madeline Williams and William Murray, held here on a grand larceny charge, says the Albuquerque Journal.

Los Angeles Order Arrest.

Murray and Miss Williams were arrested Saturday by the police on a writ from the district attorney of Los Angeles county. They employed a lawyer who filed complaint before Judge Rickley asking that a writ of habeas corpus be issued and a hearing is set for 2 weeks later in the district court.

Stole $750. It Is Said.

District Attorney Woodworth said Saturday afternoon that E. S. Bradley had sworn on a complaint before him charging Murray and Miss Williams with the theft of $750. They were given a hearing at 5 o'clock before Judge W. W. McCheslin and held at the city jail in default of a $1500 bond each. Miss Williams went during the hearing.

Will Arrest Companion.

She gave a representative of the department of justice testimony which may result in the arrest of Bradley on a charge of violating the Mann act. A companion, who was with the two stated that until a few days ago he had known Miss Williams as Mrs. Bradley and had been greatly surprised when Bradley stated that she was not his legal wife, although they had been living together for several years.

To Hire Annette Kellerman.

It is stated that Bradley was promoting a motion picture concern which was to employ Annette Kellerman as its star and William Murray was hired. Alleged failure of Bradley to pay his employees and the break with Miss Williams is said to have brought about the present difficulty.

Harding's Position On Prohibition Unsatisfactory

(By Associated Press.)
